Mr. and Mrs. Anthony AT WEST BETHEL FRIDAY EVE

R. V. and Mrs. B. Kenneth Anthony of West Bethel were given a very pleasant surprise party at the home of Mrs. Florice McInnis on Friday evening, August 19.

Mr. and Mrs. Anthony were invited to spend the evening with Mrs. McInnis, and were cheerfully surprised when their friends entered the room. After greetings were exchanged, games and singing of old time songs were enjoyed, in which both old and young participated. The music was furnished by Miss Beulah Burris and Hersey Saunders.

Delicious refreshments of ice cream and cake were served by the hostess, with Mildred Lowell, Esther Burris and Marguerite Brooks as waitresses.

At the close of the evening an original poem, dedicated to Mr. and Mrs. Anthony, was recited by Mrs. Florice McInnis on Friday evening, August 19, shorty after having returned from swimming in the lake. The death was due to a heart attack.

Harold C. Perham of Minot, representative in the legislature from the Paris class, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, listing liabilities of $46,334, of which $17,000 is unsecured, and assets of $43,000, chiefly real estate and quarrying equipment.

Two new Maine corporations have recently been approved by the Attorney General's department. They are the Eastern Manufacturing Corporation of Brewer, and the Hinckley Insurance Agency, Inc., of Old Town.

The State's $500,000 bean crop is threatened by the invasion of Mexican bean beetles, according to the State entomologist, Dr. H. B. Person. A serious outbreak has already occurred in York County.

Heavy fog Friday forced Arthur Gaskill, news photographer, and his pilot, Emory Denys of Barre, Vt., to land in Waterville Friday night. They were on their way to New Brunswick to take pictures of Capt. J. A. Mollison, the British transatlantic flier.

Getting out to look at the gas in his tank Thursday evening proved fatal to Dennis Nichols of Freeport. He lit a match to look into the tank. Flame enveloped him and he was severely burned. He was rushed to the C. M. G. Hospital where he died Saturday morning.

Leut. T. S. McLean, 35, and his 16-year-old daughter drowned in Putney Pond near Dixie Stand. He was swimming in a ladder to a dock and was struck by a log, which drove him into the water.

Leut. McLean and his daughter were swimming in the pond below the bridge, when a log struck him.

Following the drowning of the son of a local resident of the town, the wife of the father, Mrs. Ethel Hamill, 25, of Winslow, Maine, was widowed.

SOME FACTS OF INTEREST ABOUT THE COMING ECLIPSE

AUGUST 31 WILL WITNESS LAST SOLAR ECLIPSE VISIBLE IN N. E. FOR MANY DECADES

(From The Old Farmer's Almanac) Preceding every total eclipse of the Sun there is, of course, a partial phase, during which the Moon slowly encroaches upon the face of the Sun. This lasts about two hours and may be watched through a smoked glass or over-exposed photographic film, but it offers no features of unusual interest until about a half hour before totality, when so much of the Sun has been obscured as to produce changes in the appearance of the landscape, Earth and sky then become perceptibly darkened, the temperature falls, and birds and animals show by uneasy actions that they notice the change. Several minutes before totality, ghostly bands of light and shade, which are the shadows of air waves cast by the narrow remaining crescent of the Sun, may be seen fitting upon any exposed white surface.

The total eclipse itself begins at "second contact," the moment when the Sun's disk is completely covered by the Moon. Just before that moment a spectator who has a distant easterly view may see the Moon's shadow in the air, looking like a huge umbrella, and approaching with terrifying rapidity. Turning to look at the Sun (no dark glass is needed) he sees the thin rim of the Sun break into "Baily's beads" as the jagged edge of the Moon obscures it. The beads vanish in a moment, and the dazzling Sun is replaced by the dead black circle of the Moon, around which appears a marvelous halo or glory of pearly light which, the observer now realizes, has been gradually claiming his attention for several seconds. This is the Sun's corona, the vast, tenuous envelope which is so faint that it has never been seen except when the Sun's own light is cut off in a total eclipse.

It forms a bright ring around the black Moon, with faint streamers extending several times the Sun's diameter. Beyond the corona is the sky of a deeper blue than usual, in which appear the brighter stars and planets, as clearly as in deep twilight. Upon the background of the inner corona are often projected solar prominences, red flame-like masses of glowing hydrogen which rise from the surface of the Sun. These are sometimes visible to the naked eye during totality, but more often can be seen only with the aid of a telescope.

The spectacle of the total phase of the eclipse endures but a few minutes—usually less than two—after which Baily's beads reappear at the Moon's western limb, and the events of the partial phase are repeated in reverse order. Into these few minutes must be crowded the observations for which astronomers have been preparing for months and by which they learn all that can be found out about the Sun's faint surroundings. At many eclipses, of course, the astronomers' preparations are rendered futile by cloudy weather, but even when the sky is overcast there is much for the ordinary spectator to enjoy in the sudden coming of darkness and return of day-light.

On August 31, 1932, the Moon's shadow will touch the earth at a point north of Siberia, and from there will sweep through the polar regions, then across Hudson Bay, the province of Quebec, Northern Vermont, New Hampshire, south western Maine, and the eastern edge of Massachusetts, and will leave the Earth at sunset in the middle of the Atlantic Ocean. The path of the shadow includes Montreal, Portland, Portsmouth, Provincetown; Boston a few miles outside the southern border. Throughout New England the day will be darkened at mid-eclipse, and at points within the shadow path the Sun will be totally eclipsed. The intervals of totality range from 1 minute 45 seconds at the southern edge of Hudson Bay to 1 minute 38 seconds on the Maine coast. At all points in New England, the Eastern standard time of the middle of the eclipse will be close to 2:20 P. M.

The total solar eclipse, seen in Connecticut and Rhode Island in 1923, was the first event of its kind to be seen in this region in about three centuries. 1932 will witness a similar eclipse, which will be the last in New England for many decades.

The Power Restorer

Dandelion Jim

By CLARISSA MACKIE

(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate, (WNU Service)

IT WAS a decided shock for Cornelia Meade when she arrived at the little red prairie station where she had expected her uncle or one of the family to meet her, to find a perfectly strange young man in cowboy clothing and a broad hat in his hand, bowing before her.

"Miss Meade?" he asked pleasantly, and when she bowed he added, "Mr. Fisher was very sorry that he could not come himself but his bad knee has bothered him today and he thought it best to keep it very quiet. Excuse me, please, but I must see to your baggage—if you will give me your checks—thank you."

"Who does he remind you of?" asked Cornelia, and a little at her odd interest in this cowboy attached to her uncle's ranch. Cornelia Meade rather prided herself on her high attitude toward young men—she was simply indifferent to everyone of them. Sometimes her thoughts did start away from her stern keeping and she would remember one summer when they stayed at a farm and she had met a boy—a farmer's boy, and several years older than herself, who had been the most charming playmate a small girl could have.

There were other children but none of them had the charm that young "Dandelion Jim," as they called him, possessed. Cornelia had never seen him or heard of him again.

"Ready, Miss Meade?" asked the young man's cheery voice, and she turned to find a large motor car in the shade of which were her trunks.

He knew how to drive and it was only a half hour's stiff ride, fleeing like the wind itself, with no fear of traffic officer, before they entered the wide gates of a comfortable ranch house, with Uncle Paul and Aunt Kathie waving from the porch veranda. She was warmly greeted and then they explained that both the children had been surprised in the annuals of the army of the United States."

So Private Ited went Private Kissinger. "You can experiment on me," he said. "The doctor was astonished. Did he realize what he was saying? Yes, he did. He was willing to take the chance if it meant saving other lives."

Major Reed's head went up to his cap. "Sir, I salute you!" he said. It is not often that a major salutes a private thus. Later the major reported to officials in Washington. "In my opinion this exhibition of moral courage has never been surpassed in the annals of the army of the United States."

So Private Kissinger allowed himself to be bitten by mosquitoes. The fellow never seized him. For eight days he suffered agonies but in those eight days Reed and his colleagues learned more about yellow fever than had been learned in eight years before. At last the scourge of the tropics was conquered. A short time later Private Kissinger was discharged from the army and returned to his home in Indiana. But the scourge was a trencher of our enemy. Within a few years the after-effects became apparent. His health was broken and he was unable to work.

Friends applied for a pension for him but the government turned it down. Reduced to poverty, his wife took in washing and he helped it strapped to a chair. Finally in 1919 the government granted him a pension of $12 a month, then cancelled it later. Again his friends rallied to his aid and in 1921 he was given a grant of $100 a month. They also bought a farm for him, near Huntington, Indiana. She was warmly greeted and then they explained that both the children happened to be away from home for a few days.

They did not expect you quite so soon, dear, and they will be so disappointed," said Aunt Kathie, "but they will be home at once. As soon as we received your telegram, I telephoned to Kathie and she will be here this evening. Dick and a friend will arrive on the morning train. Paul, did you introduce Jim to Cornelia?" Jim, she called to Cornelia's driver.

"Yes, Mrs. Fisher," he said smiling, and Aunt Kathie said, "Cornelia, this is one of our best friends. Jimmy Lyon, foreman of the Bar-B ranch."

As Cornelia dressed after her cold bath a week later she thought of the week at the ranch, and her thorough enjoyment of all the sports of that outdoor land. She had written her mother that she would forego the trip to Europe this year that her sister and parents were taking, if she might only remain out here with her uncle and aunt.

They were a merry crowd with Dick and Kathie home and Dick's classmate, Jack Hart. There was to be a dance that evening at a nearby ranch, and they were all going, even Jim Lyon confessed that he had considered it. To tell the truth, this announcement made Cornelia very happy, for she was growing to like Jim Lyon more than she would have cared to confess. Little by little she had extracted information from the family—Jim Lyon was really from the East—and he was like one of the family, this extremely good-looking young man, whom all the cowboys called "Dandy," and whom Cornelia had found looking at her from wistful blue eyes when he thought she was not glancing in his direction.

When they came home together after the dance, Mr. Fisher winked at his wife and murrined: "Wonder what Cornelia's mother would think if the girl married our ranch foreman?"

Aunt Kathie laughed comfortably. "If she knew what we know, Paul, she wouldn't say a word—how could she? Her Jim—as rich and well educated as any of them, working for us summers because he likes the life—I suppose, though, if he should marry Cornelia, if she would have him, I mean, he would not come back here very often."

"Perhaps they would both come back," said her husband sagely.

And the very next day it happened. Cornelia and Jim, riding toward Sweet Springs, dismounted there and rested in the shade spot.

"Please tell me your whole name, Jim," said Cornelia suddenly.

Jim Lyon looked at her with eager blue eyes. "My name is Daniel Donald Lyon, named for two uncles—my nickname has always been Dan. D. Lyon."

"I wish it was Dandelion Jim," smiled Cornelia.

"Why? Why? Who told you that it used to be that out on Sammis' farm in New Hampshire. And you are the little Cornflower girl—remember? I used to call you that."

"I remember—I remember—"

"And do you remember the old yellow horse with the white nose?"

"Old Sorrel? And how I tried to ride him and slipped off of his drooping back? And you caught me—and saved me!" Cornelia's eyes were shining with happy tears.

"And you wore a little blue gingham dress—like an apron!"

"You remember that?"

"I remember everything—down all the years—and then Cornelia was in Dandelion Jim's arms."

A FEW MOMENTS
WITH THE POETS

Not keep your fair home with its order,
Its freedom from bother and noise,
But give me my four splendid boys!

SUCCESS

My pap smiled this morning when He came downstairs you see,
At Mama; and when he smiled then
She turned and smiled at me;
And when she smiled at me I went
And smiled at Mary Ann
Out in the kitchen, and she lent
It to the hired man.

So then he smiled at someone whom He saw when going by,
Who also smiled and ere he knew
Had twinkles in his eye;
He went to his office then
And smiled right at his clerk,
Who put some more ink on his pen
And smiled back from his work.

So when the clerk went home he smiled at his wife, and she Smiled at their little child
A happy as could be;

And then their little child, she took The smile to school, and when She smiled at teacher from her book
Teacher smiled back again.

And then the teacher passed on one
To Little James McBride,
Who couldn't get his lessons done
No matter how he tried;

And James took it home and told How teacher smiled at him

When he was tired and didn't scold
But said: "Don't worry, Jim!"

And when I happened to be there
That very night to play,
His mother had a smile to spare
Which came across my way;

And then I took it after awhile
Back home, and Mama said:

"Here is that very self-same smile Come back with us to bed!"

WEST STONEHAM

Deferred

Charles Carley went on Bald Mount blueberrying Monday, returning Tuesday night.

Mrs. Albert Adams, also Mrs. Charles Carley and daughters, Florence and Jeanne, spent the afternoon at Charles Emery's Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Emery and children visited at her father's from Wednesday until Saturday.

A teacher was giving a lesson to a class of small children on the canary.

Teacher: Can anyone tell me what a canary can do and I can't?

Pupil: Please, Miss, have a bath in a saucer.—Niagara Falls Review.

JOHN S. BARROWS MAKES ADDRESS AT FRYEBURG ACADEMYWEBSTER ACCLAMATION MARKS
ALUMNI DAY, AUGUST 17TH

It requires no small amount of moral courage to mount the teacher's rostrum, and to assume the responsibility of guiding the desires, and moulding the minds of impulsive youth; to lead them toward the beautiful and wonderful to be found in an education.

No man who ever undertook this responsibility can have failed to realize that in so doing he was taking a forward step himself; a step into a new realm of life, and that behind him a door would be closed forever. He becomes a different person; he increases in stature of mind; he sets his feet on a path that will lead him toward the future, and unexpected opportunities of service to humanity, whereby he will increase in ability, usefulness, influence and leadership.

"Here, on this spot, Daniel Webster took that important step. Here, his eyes were opened toward the future, and he became conscious of a new vision that portended great events; a vision indistinct but impressive.

"A he performed the duties of Preceptor of Fryeburg Academy his mind became more keen. His service to the youth enlarged his ideas and he saw greater visions. The future became alarming, and as he stepped to the teacher's rostrum he took his first step upward.

"Today we are observing in formal and dignified manner, the associations of Daniel Webster with these surroundings; not as a statesman, but as a teacher of youth—a vision which showed the way to a career in service among his fellow-men. Daniel Webster was obedient to that vision, and it led him to show the way for his fellow-citizens toward a greater nationalization; to show them the desirability of life in a land where Civilization, with all its attributes, makes Citizenship a moral responsibility;

where Education is the key to prosperity and happiness; and where "Patriot and Liberty, one and inseparable, now and forever," is the only sentiment that assures a truly great nation.

"Why, do we devote today, Alumnus Day, to the recognition of Daniel Webster? It is 131 years since he stood on this spot as preceptor of Fryeburg Academy, and then but for few months; but that long-ago, and too brief; association is an invaluable heritage to the institution. The late President Tuck of Dartmouth College, declared that he considered Webster's time in relation to the college, at a capitalized value of something like five million dollars, and that association will bring students there. If your sons do not come in due time, the clock will return your money.

cause it was where Daniel Webster was educated. If that is the indication of the importance of Webster's name and fame to Dartmouth College, surely the value of his name and service to Fryeburg Academy is too great to be ignored or minimized, but should be kept alive as long as the institution exists."

Opening Up Waste Places

Wherever there is ore, wherever there is oil, in my country or region, there will be found the American engineer. He is at home in Asia Minor and in Russia; he will soon enter Mongolia, uncovering the treasure in the earth. In his wake rumble American motor trucks, traveling over roads that Caesar's legions trod, or corduroy trails hacked out of the jungle.

The fruits of such labors are new supplies of raw materials, mineral wealth, precious stones and property that mean new trade for all the demands of civilization.

Wide Range of Dairies

Peppi and Attila, two of the noted dairies of earlier days, were at opposite extremes in their subject matter, the one told of the daily events, the other of the great occurrences. In Peppi we have a narrow, quaint and, to us, the more interesting; in Attila we observe a kind of spiritual philosophy, a blending of a moralistic vein not always pleasant. But the average dairy is quite like Attila in every way, and in consequence not so interesting.

Marmalade and a Queen

Waiting for Steve, since that she particularly enjoys our "Historic Stories," Miss Eufronia questions the supposed English origin of marmalade.

Many queen of Scots brought over from France the preserves she loved so well, says this correspondent.

They lived so much on an extent that every time she was ill she would call for it until it became known as "Marmalade" by her French maid.

Mr. and Mrs. Cole have returned home from the Leake Hospital in Berlin, where she underwent an operation.

Several members of Mountain View Arrow attended Oxford County Fair in Bangor and Falmouth Fair the evening of Aug. 24.

Miss Annie Hart has come to Bethel to spend a few days with her older brother, Eddie.

Winfred Bates is hauling the wood from the Ralph Andrews place.

Protected by Nature

The example of the falconer present a good example of protective coloration. They are not noticed as we are scarcely discernible in their crude nest which is nothing more than a slight depression in the ground among a few tufts of grass and shells. The falcons and hawks of the young birds are equally protective and the young of this species are especially adept at hiding in slight depressions in the earth where they blend perfectly with the background.

EGGS HAVE BEEN very low in price, but quality eggs continue to demand a substantial premium in the larger towns and cities, at least.

Edie Billings has gone to stay to work for her daughter, Edie, for a few weeks.

Charles Cole has his new car barn finished.

Mrs. Eva Pound has gone to work at Bowdoin Point.

About everyone in this place is doing business.

Winfred Bates is hauling the wood from the Ralph Andrews place.

Start the chicks eating at twenty-four hours of age—the forty-eight-hour feeding and practice has passed into history as a racing fallacy.

WHY BOYS NEED SCOUTING

6. Interest Enrichment for Rural Life.

Modern society changed in the last 30 years at an extremely fast rate. Almost over night new social activities came into being. The cities presented an ever changing program of social life which was extolled beyond its true worth by magazines and books.

Alluring possibilities attracted many from rural districts to city life and many were the tragedies that occurred when the country boys did not make the right social contact.

Only recently has anything been done to open up the vast opportunities that lie in the rural districts.

Because social life in the rural districts was of a low interest order, the young people looked longingly toward the city. It is of great importance to assure the young people of any community that their own community has great social possibilities and to provide facilities whereby they may receive the needed instruction of how to enjoy the different phases of their own social life.

Today the Boy Scout troops from the smaller communities are coming into their own. No longer is the feeling prevalent that to be in the city is an advantage.
